Ontario Health Teams bring HealthPathways to Canada

(LONDON, ONTARIO) - The Middlesex London Ontario Health Team (MLOHT) has partnered with the Burlington Ontario Health Team and the Greater Hamilton Health Network to launch HealthPathways, a clinician-designed tool that supports health-care professionals in providing locally relevant, evidence-based guidelines and resources.

In collaboration with New Zealand-based Streamliners, HealthPathways will enhance health-care outcomes across the three communities through a shared approach, marking a milestone for integrated health systems that will enable clinicians to deliver more efficient and effective care and improve outcomes.

“We are excited to be partnering with Burlington and Hamilton to launch HealthPathways across our communities to improve health-care delivery,” said MLOHT Lead Amber Alpaugh-Bishop, adding in the ever-changing landscape of health care, an integrated care platform offers a transformative opportunity for physicians to streamline patient management, enhance system navigation, and improve overall delivery.

“Providing easy access to evidence-based, locally tailored guidelines enhances the quality and consistency of care and empowers care providers to make informed decisions, leading to better experiences and health outcomes.”

OHTs bring providers, patients/clients, families, and care partners together to improve equitable access to better connected care in their local communities. Health-care providers (including hospitals, doctors and home and community care providers) work as one coordinated team – no matter where they provide care, to strengthen local services, make it easier for people to navigate the system, and create seamless transitions between providers.

Integrated health for better outcomes

HealthPathways will allow for clinical guidance in real-time by creating a single access point among health-care providers to simplify clinical best practices, local navigation options, and patient education. It will give health-care professionals guidance for quick and accurate referrals, access to educational material to share with patients, foster collaboration across specialties, and allow for more coordinated care and greater options in managing patients.

As a global team, headquartered in Christchurch, New Zealand, Streamliners is looking forward to leveraging its worldwide team and expertise to ensure that HealthPathways remains tailored to the specific needs and challenges of Canadians.

“We’re thrilled to welcome Greater Hamilton, Burlington and London Middlesex, three Ontario Health Teams into our global community,” said Stella Ward, Streamliners CEO. “This partnership is an opportunity for our global network to share existing knowledge and processes so that we can continue to deliver on our purpose - to improve the health and wellbeing of people around the globe.”

The MLOHT wants to thank the Ontario Health Teams in Burlington and the Greater Hamilton area for their collaboration in this partnership, which represents the work of our patients, families, care partners, collaborators, and health-care partners.
